Tomáš G. Masaryk was born in Hodonín, Moravia in 1850. From 1878-1882 he was lecturer at the University of Vienna . Then he was professor of philosophy at the Charles University in Prague during 1882-1914. He published both on philosophical, sociological and political subjects, asserting the concepts of democracy, tolerance and religious sense. He was member of the Austrian parliament during 1891-1893 and 1907-1914. He advocated a reorganization of the Austro-Hungarian Empire into a federation in which the different nations would have equal rights. After the outbreak of the First World War however he turned to the idea of totally independent nation states.

During his exile from 1916-1918 he was chairman of the Czechoslovak National Council . In 1918 Masaryk became the first president of independent Czechoslovakia. Together with his foreign minister Edvard Beneš he defended the League of Nations as an instrument in maintaining peace and international justice. He died in Lány, Czechoslovakia in 1937.

Edvard Beneš was born in Kožlany, Bohemia in 1884. From 1909 he was professor of economics at the Prague Academy of Commerce . In 1912 he became lecturer and in 1922 professor in sociology at the University of Prague. From 1915 he lived a few years in Paris. In 1918 he became general secretary of the Czechoslovak National Council, which was recognized as the Czechoslovak provisional government. As foreign minister he was head of the Czechoslovak delegation to the Paris peace conference in 1919-1920. He succeeded Masaryk as president of Czechoslovakia in 1935. He resisted German claims on the Sudeten areas in the western parts of Czechoslovakia, but was forced to yield by the Munich agreement in 1938, after which he resigned. He was then leader of the Czechoslovak government-in-exile in London. In May 1945 he was warmly welcomed in Prague and was reelected as president. He resigned in 1948 after having been forced to install a Communist directed cabinet. He died in 1948 at Sezimovo Usti, Czechoslovakia.

The papers were received by the IISH in 1990 and consist of photocopies of correspondence between Tomáš Masaryk and Edvard Beneš 1918-1923. The original letters can be found at the Ústav T.G. Masaryka in Prague. Correspondence of 1919 has been published in Šolle, Zdenek,
