Context

Historical Note

The first generation of Iranian socialists participated in the Constitutional Revolution of 1906-1908; in 1917 the Adalat (عدالت) (Justice) Party was founded in Baku, Azerbaijan, which in 1920 changed its name into Ferqeh-e Komunist-e Irān (فرقه کمونیست ایران) (Communist Party of Iran); suppressed by the Rezā Shah (رضاشاه) autocracy during 1921-1941; in 1941 the Hezb-e Tudeh-e Irān (حزب توده ایران) (Tudeh or Mass Party of Iran, TPI) was founded, which rapidly expanded and became a major political force in the following years; its strength was drastically reduced after 1953 because of repression by the regime of Muhammad Rezā Shah (محمد رضا شاه) but the TPI managed to survive and played a role in the revolution of 1979. Next to the TPI the Sāzemān-e Cherikhā-ye Fedā'i-ye Khalq-e Irān (سازمان چریک های فدایی خلق ایران) (Organization of the Iranian People's Fedai Guerillas) came into existence through the merging in 1971 of two guerrilla groups which had been active since the mid-1960s; after the revolution of 1979 the Fedai split over their attitudes towards the Islamic Republic; persecutions by the Khomeini government started in 1981; a large number of the leaders and cadre members of the TPI, the Fedai and other left organizations were arrested, executed or sentenced to prison; an internal opposition within the TPI emerged after 1983 and founded the Hezb-e Demokrātik-e Mardom-e Irān (حزب دموکراتیک ایران) (Iranian People's Democratic Party). Ahmadi, Hamid (حمید احمدی): born in Sari, Iran 1945; graduated from Iran's naval academy in 1971; member of the Central Committee of the Tudeh Party; left the TPI in 1986 and became research fellow at the Free University of Berlin.

Custodial History

The documents, which are described in this list, are from the personal papers of Hamid Ahmadi, a former naval officer, who was a member of the Central Committee of the Tudeh Party of Iran. Ahmadi left the Tudeh Party in 1986 and is now lecturer at the Free University of Berlin. But due to his political and academical interests he continued collecting documents concerning the socialist and communist movements in Iran.

The documents, which cover a wide historical period, beginning with 1917 and ending by 1990, were transferred to the IISH in 1994. The collection was already arranged, partly by subject, partly by document type. The arrangement has not been changed but the documents were packed and numbered in accordance with IISH practice. Series of periodicals and some pamphlets were transferred to the library. The size of the collection is 2.12 m.

Iranian socialist and communist parties, organizations and groups

The origins of the socialist and communist movement in Iran trace back to the end of the 19th century. The first generation of socialists, whose ideas were progressive liberal rather than marxist, participated in the Constitutional Revolution of 1906 in the ranks of the Ferqeh-e Demokrat (Democrat Party) . With a major boost from the Russian Revolution of 1917 the Justice (Adalat) Party was founded in Baku in 1917 . This party published Biraq-e Adalat (Flag of Justice. At its congress in ) June 1920 the party changed its name into Firqeh-i Kommunist-i Iran (Communist Party of Iran) . In the same congress it was announced that the party had established together with the Jangalis (men of the jungle) in Gilan in the north a Soviet Socialist Republic. Reza Khan , who took power in 1921 , destroyed the Soviet Republic in Gilan and suppressed the Communist Party. During the 1930s a marxist organization against the Reza Shah regime emerged among young Iranian intellectuals. After the arrest of its 53 members in May 1937 it became known as 'the Fifty-three'. The central figure of the group was physicist Dr. Taqhi Arani . This group published Donya and formed the nucleus of the Tudeh Party . The Hezb-e Tudeh-e Iran (Tudeh or Mass Party of Iran) was founded on 2 October 1941 , immediately after the fall of the Reza Shah autocracy. Due to a rapid expansion it became a major force in the post-World War II period, especially during the years of oil nationalization ( 1950-1953 ). After the 1953 coup its strength declined drastically, as a result of the repression of the Shah regime and its secret service, the notorious SAVAK . A number of splits and defections weakened the party furthermore. Yet it managed to regain some of its former strength during the 1970s and the party played an active role in the revolutionary conjuncture of 1977-1979 .

The 1960s and 1970s saw also the rise of the New Left in Iran. In March 1971 two guerrilla groups which were active since the early and mid-1960s, merged and adopted the name Sazman-e Cherik-ha-ye Fadaii Khalq Iran (The Guerrilla's Fadaii Organisation of Iran) , which is known in short as the Fadaii . Using guerrilla warfare tactics the Fadaii fought against the Shah regime for a decade. Shortly after the revolution in February 1979 the Fadaii split into two factions, because of the conflict of opinions on need of armed struggle and the nature of the Khomeini regime. The Minority (Akaliyat) faction insisted on continuing the armed struggle, while the Majority (Aksariyat) considered the Islamic Republic progressive and supported it.

The Khomeini regime first attacked the Minority, the Mujahedin and other militant leftist groups. In early 1983 it turned against the Tudeh Party . In May the party was outlawed.

A large number of the leaders and cadres of the party were arrested, executed or sentenced to long prison terms. Almost one year later the Majority Fadaii shared the same fate.

After the arrests of 1983 an internal opposition emerged against the central committee of the Tudeh Party. This group started to leave the party after 1986 and founded the Hezb-e Demokratik Mardom Iran (Iranian People's Democratic Party) .
